Lighthouse offers a series of highly customizable courses on a range of ethics and compliance topics, commonly addressed in corporate codes of conduct.

These programs are intended to communicate organizational values and foster commitment to ethical and legal business practices.
Ethics and Code of Conduct

30 minutes
Ethics is about doing the “right” thing. In a business setting, ethics also involves ensuring that company values are shared and upheld by all members of the organization. This modular course introduces the concept of business ethics and highlights the company code of ethics and/or business conduct. Learners apply “the code” to a series of ethical issues common in the workplace. This course also discusses responsibilities, procedures, and “whistleblower” protections associated with reporting ethics and/or legal violations.

Ethics and Code of Conduct for Government Contractors

45 minutes
Business ethics involves educating and aligning the actions of individuals with relevant laws and the preferred values of the organization. This course discusses the many benefits of promoting business ethics as well as the legal requirements of government contractors with respect to ethics and compliance. It highlights the organization’s Code of Ethics and/or Business Conduct and asks learners to apply the Code to a series of hypothetical scenarios in which ethical issues may arise in the workplace. It also discusses responsibilities, procedures, and “whistleblower” protections associated with reporting ethics and/or legal violations.

Audience:
All employees working on government contracts

Ethics and Code of Conduct for Colleges and Universities

50 minutes
This course will introduce you to the College’s Code of Conduct and challenge you to apply the Code to a few scenarios. The purpose is to provide an overview of the College’s expectations of its Members and representatives. The College expects its Members and their representatives to adhere to the highest ethical standards, including honesty, integrity, respect for others, fair dealing, diligence, and prudence and accountability in the use of the College’s resources. If you have questions or discover gaps or inconsistencies in policy and application, please share your observation with your supervisor.

MICRO-LEARNING MODULES

Business Ethics: Sustaining a Responsible Organization

To successfully address ethics issues that arise in the workplace, it’s helpful for employees to understand some key foundations regarding ethics and compliance. This module introduces employees to important concepts as expectations of responsible conduct, responsibilities to stakeholders, challenges they are likely to face in a business setting, and the importance of building competencies at recognizing, evaluating, and resolving questions and concerns. This module provides an important foundation to ensuing ethics and compliance instruction.

<td>Businesses need to leverage the skills and resources of their vendors, contractors, consultants, distributors and other partners to increase their chance of success and best serve customers. But all organizations have their own values, culture, standards, objectives; these differences can cause conflicts among partners, sometimes leading to conduct that the other finds questionable, or that even is illegal. A business needs to carefully manage its relations with its third parties to avoid or reduce risks of unethical conduct and increase the chance of success. Each individual has an important role in helping the organization to manage these third-party relationships.</td>

New York Preventing Sexual Harassment for Managers

60 minutes
Sexual harassment continues to remain a real workplace problem. Media stories and studies clarify the high toll that this misconduct takes on targeted employees, coworkers and the overall work environment. A workplace that allows—and even encourages—such conduct cannot promote respect for all employees to obtain their best performance. New York State and City both have enacted laws that require most employers to train all employees on sexual harassment prevention and response. This course helps managers understand their special duty to promote a workplace free of sexual harassment, prevent such improper conduct and effectively respond to instances and complaints.

Lighthouse’s health and safety courses are designed to help your organization meet regulatory requirements, reduce loss and risks, prevent injuries, and potentially save lives. Developed with the appropriate experts in their fields, Lighthouse’s innovative courses are clear, concise, and comprehensive, with scenarios and interactive exercises that help employees retain what they have learned. Our courses are designed to meet OSHA, EPA, DOT, and other regulatory requirements in conjunction with job-specific training.
Preventing Workplace Violence: Manager Edition

30 minutes
Unfortunately, workplace violence has become an important safety and health issue in the workplace today. This course designed with managers and supervisors in mind, discusses common types of workplace violence and the risk factors for experiencing violence at work. It discusses the steps managers and supervisors can take when dealing with the warning signs of potential violence, techniques for diffusing violent situations, and what to do in a violent or potentially violent situation. It also discusses critical steps to take in response to an active shooting or other actively violent situation.

Audience: Managers and Supervisors

Back Injury Prevention

45 minutes
We depend on our back for so many activities. Unfortunately, back problems are so common that 60-80% of adults will complain of back pain at some point in their lives. An injured or sore back can make everyday life difficult and painful. Maintaining a healthy back is vital to ensure a good quality of life and our ability to do our job. This course presents lifting rules that will help prevent back injuries, as well as preventative methods to maintain a healthy back. Strategies to prevent strains and injuries during static activities such as seated and standing work are also provided.

Bloodborne Pathogens: Controlling Workplace Exposure to Bloodborne Pathogens

45 minutes
Exposure to blood and other potentially infectious materials is a major concern for organizations and employees, particularly for those who respond to medical incidents. This course teaches how to identify bloodborne pathogens and how they are transmitted. Employees will know how to control exposure to bloodborne pathogens and the procedures to follow in the event of an exposure incident. They will also learn how to minimize the chances of contracting HIV, HCV, and HBV by using appropriate exposure controls such as Universal Precautions, PPE, and vaccines. The course teaches how to follow procedures in an exposure plan for clean up, disinfection, decontamination, and follow up.

Audience:
All employees who may be exposed to blood or other body fluids.

<td>Hazardous Energy Control (Lock-out/Tag-out)</td>
<td>30 minutes</td>
<td>This course describes the features and implementation of OSHA’s Control of Hazardous Energy standard (29 CFR §1910.147). The material is intended for all “affected workers” and provides the essential information for “authorized workers” to safely perform work on both electrical and non-electrical energy sources (moving/rotating, hydraulic, pneumatic, chemical, or thermal). Note that affected workers are those who operate or use equipment on which servicing or maintenance is being performed under lockout or tag-out, or whose job requires him/her to work in an area in which such servicing or maintenance is being performed. Authorized workers are those who actually perform the maintenance and repair activities and need to practice lockout and/or tag-out procedures.</td>

<td>Fall Protection</td>
<td>45 minutes</td>
<td>Working safely at elevations can be a matter of life or death. Falls are the fourth leading cause of workplace fatalities in general industry. Working at elevated locations requires knowledge of fall hazards and fall protection equipment in order to prevent serious injury. This course introduces when and how to use fall protection equipment and the hazards associated with working at heights or on a roof.</td>

<td>Introduction to Laser Safety</td>
<td>60 minutes</td>
<td>With the advent of a wider variety of more powerful lasers integrated into many areas of modern life, the issues involving laser safety are of even greater importance. People working with lasers, or with equipment containing lasers, need to understand the hazards associated with laser light, and know what precautions are in place to control these hazards. After taking this course, laser operators, and those working with equipment containing lasers will be able to identify the nature and hazards of laser radiation, describe safety issues associated with the use of lasers in industrial and research environments, become familiar with standards and guidelines in order to control laser hazards, and identify and follow exposure controls and emergency procedures.</td>

Laboratory Safety

60 minutes
This course examines workplace safety in laboratory environments, including health hazards, exposures, physical hazards, hazard recognition, exposure controls and emergency procedures. This course also includes optional sections on biological hazards. The course will assist employers in meeting the training requirements of 29 CFR 1910.1450, Occupational Exposure to Hazardous Chemicals in Laboratories. When employees complete this course, they will understand the physical and health hazards of materials commonly used in laboratories. They will also understand the methods and observations that may be used to detect the presence or release of a hazardous material and understand exposure control measures.

Audience:
Research laboratory personnel

Ladder Safety

45 minutes
Ladders are practical tools that are utilized every day in a variety of tasks, both at work and at home. Unfortunately, accidents related to the use of ladders result in thousands of ER visits, and a number of deaths every year. This course identifies the risks involved in utilizing the portable ladder and offers steps to safe use including selection, inspection, set up, and rules for use.

Electrical Safety Awareness

60 minutes
This course is designed to present an overview of electrical energy and the hazards of systems operating at 50-600 Volts, as well as workplace practices to prevent injuries, fires and arc flashes. This course will assist employers in meeting the training requirements of 29 CFR 1910, Subpart S, and the regulation that allows only a “qualified person” to work on or test energized electric circuit parts or equipment that carry more than 50 volts of electricity.

Audience:
Workers who may be exposed to or work with electrical equipment on the job

Code:

Radiation Safety

30 minutes
New employees will learn about ionizing and non-ionizing radiation in the workplace. This module teaches the health hazards that may be presented by radiation producing industrial equipment and how to control workplace exposure to radiation through safe handling. Note that this course does not cover radioactive isotope usage.

Audience:
Workers in facilities with radiation-producing industrial equipment.

Code:

Radioisotope Safety

45 minutes
Radiation exposure from use of radioactive materials can cause adverse health effects. Using exposure controls and following safe work practices help minimize radiation exposures and prevent radiation contamination of work areas and equipment. After completing this course, learners will be able to identify safety issues associated with radioisotopes commonly used in the laboratory environment, describe health hazards associated with radiation, identify exposure control methods and monitoring techniques, and follow appropriate emergency procedures.

Audience:
All employees who work around radioisotopes commonly used in a laboratory environment
